U.S. Trade Deficit Hits $17.6 Billion, A Monthly Record

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit widened to a record $17.6 billion in October, a massive 25 percent increase from $14.08 billion in September...

Stocks, Dollar Retreat on October Data

NEW YORK — Wall Street stock prices fell sharply Thursday in volatile trading and the dollar slumped to new lows after the report of a record monthly $17.6 billion U.S. trade deficit.

The dollar's plunge to postwar lows against the Deutsche mark and yen in New York came after the U.S. currency showed some resilience in Europe...

The trade figures pushed the Dow Jones industrial average of major U.S. stocks down 49 points in the first 20 minutes to 1,853.

Blue chips recovered nicely but the dollar dragged us back down, said Ralph Acampora of Kidder, Peabody & Co., the U.S. investment bank.

The ability of the Dow to rebound for at least part of the session, after three straight gains this week, contrasted sharply with stock exchanges in Europe...

But in contrast to the wild selling on Oct. 19, when the Dow average plunged by 508 points in one day, trading volume was moderate.

2 Leaders Say Good-bye, Call New Summit in Moscow in '88

WASHINGTON — Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Thursday that his summit meeting with President Ronald Reagan had marked the beginning of a "new and important" stage in Soviet-American relations...

The Soviet and American leaders formally ended their meeting in the rain on the White House lawn, with declarations of goodwill and of determination to continue their dialogue.

Although neither the president nor Mr. Gorbachev mentioned the possibility of another summit meeting at their farewell ceremony...

In a New Potemkin Village, 200 Missiles

By Robert C. Toth

WASHINGTON — Amid signs that the Kremlin once had "Potemkin village" nuclear missiles, Soviet officials have told the United States that about 200 of their medium-range missiles, described earlier as operational weapons...

senior U.S. official said Wednesday. The Potemkin reference is to Grigori A. Potemkin, an 18th-century Russian field marshal who built beautiful sham villages in the Crimea to impress the Russian court.

Soviet deception, including digging impact craters for missiles in a way to suggest greater accuracy than was achieved, has been widely suggested by U.S. conservatives in the past.

could cast doubt on the negotiations toward a long-range missile pact now under way.

The 200 "training missiles" were not the only surprise in the Soviet statistics that came with the final treaty. Equally striking was the large number of nondeployed, or stored, Soviet missiles, which the U.S. official acknowledged was "on the high side" of U.S. intelligence estimates.

The Reagan administration and intelligence officials have accepted the Soviet explanation for the discrepancy in totals, the official said, noting that U.S. inspectors would

Klosk Rights Worker Slain in Salvador

SAN SALVADOR (UPI) — Two gunmen ambushed and killed a leader of the government's Human Rights Commission in the second assassination of a rights worker in as many months, the police said Thursday.

René Joaquin Cárdenas Vargas, the commission's eastern region delegate, was attacked by two gunmen who shot him at least five times as he entered his home in San Miguel, 80 miles (130 kilometers) east of the capital, the police said.

The killing came as tensions rose in El Salvador, most conspicuously between the Christian Democratic government and rightist groups.

Worry Rises Over Vote in South Korea

By Clyde Haberman

SEOUL — Serious concern has been raised here that the South Korean military might step in to cancel next week's presidential election, or to nullify its results if the opposition wins.

The concern is based on reports that elements in the army, notably those responsible for domestic surveillance, have discussed possible action.

It is also rooted in the perception of some political analysts that the ruling party candidate, Roh Tae Woo, is doing less well than his strategists had hoped.

There are people in this government and ruling party who feel they cannot lose the election, a specialist in South Korean military affairs said.

Mr. Reagan sat silently as Mr. Gorbachev did all the talking during the photo session before their meeting Wednesday.

While Mr. Reagan refused to take questions from reporters in their first Oval Office meeting, Mr. Gorbachev spoke up firmly and at some length. He held himself out as a responsible and thoughtful leader when asked if he was bringing any surprises.

When Mr. Reagan did take questions from four columnists, the White House made public only a few excerpts, largely without substance.

The discrepancy in the Soviet missile count arose because a few weeks ago, Soviet negotiators in Geneva said the treaty would eliminate more than 1,950 missiles on their side. But as the data came in, broken down by type of missile, the total added up to only 1,752.
The Soviet explanation, according to the senior official, was that the Soviet Union initially had counted the dummy missiles as nondeployed or stored missiles.

Jane's Cites Major Advances in Soviet Jet Fighters

LONDON — The Soviet Union has made significant advances in air power and has developed a new generation of combat aircraft equal to the best in the West, according to the military reference work, Jane's All the World's Aircraft.
In the foreword of a new edition published Thursday, Jane's editor, John Taylor, wrote:
"NATO would be unwise to believe that it still has the clear superiority in conventional air power that it has enjoyed for most of the period since World War II."

Mr. Taylor said that while Western governments sought ways to renew their air forces as economically as possible, Moscow had created new air defense and attack units generations ahead of those they replaced.
He cited a modified version of the Sukhoi Su-27 fighter aircraft as one example of the Soviet aviation advances.
"Its turbofans and radar are as advanced as the airframe," he wrote, "it appears to provide the Soviet air forces with a combat aircraft as good as any in the West."

He said that Soviet combat pilots have started to display a brassness and confidence usually associated with their Western counterparts and their new attitude should not be taken lightly by adversaries.
"Elision is appearing amongst Soviet Air Force squadrons with the appearance of winged bladders painted on the fuselages of Flanders and Fulcrums, the Su-27 and MiG-29 fighters based on the Kola Peninsula.
And even a cartoon-like dolphin figure has been seen on the fin of a Flogger, or MiG-27, Mr. Taylor wrote.
The nerve of the Soviet pilots, he said, was displayed dramatically over the Barents Sea in September when a Norwegian Air Force P-3B Orion on a surveillance mission lost a propeller after being clipped by a Su-27.
Both aircraft returned safely to base.

REAL ESTATE DEMAND OUTSTRIPS SUPPLY

When Gérard Jean and Hubert de Mont-Marin left Dupuy-Saatchi to found their own ad agency three years ago, they naturally looked for space in Neuilly. "We had always worked here," explains Mr. de Mont-Marin, "and our new agency needed the credibility that a chic Neuilly address could give us." The agency, Jean et Mont-Marin, first moved into a 300-square-meter town house, known as a "hôtel particulier." Two years later, after landing such important budgets as Pentax, Lancôme perfumes, Pan American Airways and S.T. Dupont watches, the partners set about looking for larger headquarters.

The search lasted more than six months and involved several real estate agents. The town house they moved into last month was built in 1784 and entirely renovated. The oldest of its kind in Neuilly, it is being rented to the agency on the basis of a 30-year lease which owns it.

Three times larger than the agency's former house, it is also two and a half times as expensive. "The price we're paying has jumped from 1,000 FF to 2,500 FF per square meter and we had to decide if we wanted it in less than half-an-hour or it would have been grabbed by someone else," recounts Mr. de Mont-Marin.

becomes available, is taken right away." Only five minutes from the Champs-Élysées, Neuilly is by far the most sought-after and expensive suburb of Paris. According to Françoise Vercaemer, of the international realtors Jones Lang Wootton, a major incentive for companies is the suburb's extremely low professional tax rate. At 7.917 percent (as compared to 11.667 percent in Paris, an average of 13 to 22 percent in the other Parisian suburbs and 27.297 percent in Aubervilliers to the northeast), Neuilly has the lowest company tax rate of the whole Paris region.

In addition, when companies started flocking to this then completely residential suburb at the beginning of the 1970s, the rents were cheaper than in most of Paris.

"When the commercial boom was at its height in the mid-1970s," recalls Mr. Labro, "we had thousands and thousands of meters available and sellers were forced to negotiate to be competitive." Since then the price of real estate in Neuilly hasn't stopped climbing. Over the past two years, with space increasingly rare and demand just as strong, they have soared 20 to 25 percent.

Office space is renting for 1,700 to 2,200 francs per square meter and selling for around 25,000 francs per square meter. That makes Neuilly property less expensive than certain prime areas in the 7th, 8th, 16th and 17th arrondissements, but a good deal more than many areas in eastern and northern Paris.

Yet, despite the influx of large companies, Neuilly has managed to preserve its tranquil residential character. An urbanization plan, first adopted in 1951, has protected it from being overrun by commerce and business. Zoning

LIGHT AT THE END OF THE TUNNEL

With its tree-lined avenues and quiet streets, Neuilly could almost be mistaken for a peaceful provincial town — were it not for the avenue Charles de Gaulle, the main east-west road from Paris that currently cuts clean across its center. Every day, 150,000 cars take it to go back and forth to Paris.

The ideal solution — rerouting the traffic underground and creating a tree-lined pedestrian area above — might seem simple enough. Yet finding the appropriate financing has taken years.

According to the Mayor of Neuilly, Nicolas Sarkozy, one reason why the current one billion franc project has succeeded where others failed is because of the decision to cover only part of the avenue at a time. The 435 meters of tunnel for car traffic is only the first step but, as Sarkozy says, "it was important to begin."

A preview of the finished project.

He adds: "Another reason the project was given the green light was the decision to extend the Vincennes-Point de Neuilly metro line to La Défense." Consequently, the state will pay the largest part (40 percent) followed by the RATP (20 percent), the Département and the two cities of Courbevoie and Puteaux (11.8 percent). Neuilly will pay only 3.4 percent.

The work currently consists of removing all the pipes and electric cables beneath the avenue. Next February work will begin on the extension of the metro line to La Défense, the creation of an underground tunnel for the metro and cars, and the installation of 15,000 square meters of trees, gardens and fountains. The City Hall expects the project to be operational by mid-1992. In the end, 80 percent of all traffic will go underground.

THE NEAR WEST REDISCOVERED

Looking at Neuilly as it is now, with its fine boutiques, bevy of businesses, and sumptuous homes, it is hard to imagine that this area was once a plot of swampland. But that was back in the days when the potato was still nouvelle cuisine.

In 1786 Anoiné Parmentier presented his first crop to Louis XVI. The vegetable — formerly confined to the Limousine area of France — swiftly became so popular that Benjamin Franklin found himself at a dinner where the menu consisted of nothing but potatoes in every possible form.

The pastoral past disappeared as thousands of companies discovered Neuilly's proximity to Paris, greater greenery and pure air. "The challenge now," as explained by Mayor Nicolas Sarkozy, "is to preserve the ecology of our town. We want the green of parks and gardens and trees to be the color of our city."

Efforts to preserve the trees and parks began back in the 1950s under Achille Peretti, the former mayor. Since then the city has blossomed into the home of 3,135 businesses employing 35,000 persons in 800,000 square meters of offices, mostly on the avenue Charles de Gaulle and the Ile de la Jatte. Yet building restrictions have preserved the city's 248 hectares of parks and gardens, guaranteeing the 65,000 inhabitants of Neuilly some 38 m<sup>2</sup> of park area per person.

No wonder 50 percent of the residents are either company presidents, professionals or top managers (not to mention the diplomatic population which live in the city's 24 foreign embassy residences). The 64,450 inhabitants currently pay 1 percent of the total income tax paid in France and 24 percent of those in the Département of the Hauts-de-Seine.

Neuilly's commercial sector is equally upmarket. As a crossroads of communication, it houses 400 companies in the fields of radio, television, publicity and publishing.

As early as the 1930s, Chanel Perfumes moved in because, "we had a presentiment of the luxurious character of this site," says a spokesman for the company. Since 1980, Yves St. Laurent Perfumes has also been based on the Ile de la Jatte and, next year, will be joined by Paco Rabanne.

Building and refurbishing projects account for 63.48 percent of the city budget. Massive projects such as the 40 million franc remodeling of the Place du Marché are being financed by city hall in conjunction with private companies to relieve the burden on the taxpayer.

In a master-stroke of combining good living with sound urban planning, the city has also found a solution for the busy — and noisy — traffic on the avenue Charles de Gaulle. And work is forging ahead on the installation of a total cable network for mid-1989.

As Renée Michelangeli-Peretti, daughter of former Mayor Achille Peretti and director of Neuilly Journal Independent concludes: "You cannot prevent change, but you have to manage it well."

— Harriet Welty-Rochefort

regulations restrict commercial activities to the northern extremity of the suburb and the area on both sides of avenue Charles de Gaulle. Practically three-quarters of Neuilly are reserved for residential housing.

"The 1951 Urbanization Plan sheltered Neuilly from the over-development that many towns experienced in the wave of post-World War II construction," states Thierry Gaubert, one of mayor Nicolas Sarkozy's close collaborators. Stringent restrictions govern the height of buildings and their appearance. The town's trees are safeguarded, as are its gardens.

Such regulations have enhanced the value of the suburb while contributing to the rarity of space and the difficulty of construction. Mr. Gaubert estimates the number of new constructions at three or four a year. These usually involve the demolition of town houses which are difficult and expensive to keep up. Their owners will sometimes exchange them for a floor of the apartment house built in its place.

Many old-time Neuilly residents regret the disappearance of the private houses that covered the suburb half a century ago. Of the remaining 400, only the 300 located on private streets (dead-ends accessible only to occupants and their guests), are protected from demolition by municipal legislation. Many of the others will eventually be replaced by apartment houses or office buildings in zones where commercial activities are allowed. Yet despite the cost of a town house, anywhere between 10 and 25 million FF, there continues to be a strong market for them. A turn-of-the-century town house near the Bois de Boulogne (the largest park in the Parisian area), with 300 square meters of living space and a 150-square-meter garden, recently sold for 15 million francs.

According to Noelle Portier of Neuilly-Paris-Ouest, one of eight realty agencies based here, Neuilly is the perfect combination of city and country living. "Bordered by the Bois de Boulogne, we have numerous municipal gardens," Ms. Portier points out. "What's more, most apartments have large terraces or balconies, while town houses have gardens." One of the few vacancies currently available at Neuilly-Paris-Ouest, for example, is a four room apartment in a modern building with 120 square meters of living space, a 180-square-meter terrace and parking. It is selling for 4.7 million francs.

Such luxury, so near to the center of Paris, is not within everyone's reach and over the years Neuilly has become a rich man's suburb, a status symbol for its residents. According to Daniel Calais of the Department of Urbanism at Town Hall, the average selling price in the residential market is 35,000 FF per square meter, up 20 percent over the past two years. Renting has become so expensive that the market has virtually disappeared.

A combination of lack of office space, high prices and congestion along the main streets has sent some companies north or farther west. Nonetheless, the real estate market in Neuilly is expected to remain as tight as it is today, with demand high and the vacancy rate low. Nobody can predict whether prices will continue to climb as they have over the past two years, nor how much people are willing to pay for space here, but no other suburb of Paris and few of its districts offer the convenience, amenities and prestige of Neuilly.

— Joyce Wakmann

Secluded homes in quiet streets.

The difficulties encountered by Jean et Mont-Marin in finding space and the price they had to pay to stay in this prestigious suburb of Paris are by no means unique. "A company that wants to move into Neuilly today has to be extremely determined and patient," states Robert Labro of Jean Thourard, one of France's top commercial real estate consultants. Pictures of Jazz in a Singapore Bar

by Paul Zach

SINGAPORE — A casual encounter under the swirling ceiling fans of the Saxophone bar and restaurant has produced an unexpectedly harmonious setting for the debut of an exhibition of jazz photographs by Robert Freeman.

Freeman, a London-based photographer best known for the stark black-and-white image used as the classic album cover of "With the Beatles," discovered Saxophone while shooting a television commercial here early this year. There, he met Fabrice de Bary, the club's 25-year-old Belgian owner.

At the time, Freeman had just dusted off his moody, old jazz images: an intense John Coltrane blowing a sax and flute into a mirror to boost the clarity of their sound; Dizzy Gillespie exercising his elastic cheeks with the Jazz Messengers, and other greats such as Eric Dolphy, Coleman Hawkins, McCoy Tyner, Cannonball Adderley and Elvin Jones immersed in their art.

Back in London, Freeman was encouraged to invest the effort in producing high-quality prints for exhibition when he showed the pictures to Alice Coltrane, who was in town for a concert. "She kissed the portrait of Coltrane and commented that the pictures captured that lyrical moment when a musician was at one with his instrument," Freeman recalls.

THE exhibition, which runs through Dec. 18, is scheduled to make the rounds of more traditional venues in Tokyo, London, New York and Paris next year. But the Singapore club makes for a stylish and surprisingly apt introduction for the photographs.

Set in a converted Chinese shop behind a pink neon sign, Saxophone is the kind of cozy niche where jazz thrives. Musicians like of Ellis Marsalis (Wynton's father) have jammed on the raised makeshift stage behind the bar on the narrow first floor. At night their sounds waft up to the second floor dining room where Freeman's black-and-white portraits take on an added dimension amid the pink and grey decor.

Freeman, 48, likens the choice of venue to launching a play off-Broadway. "I felt a sympathy with the atmosphere of the restaurant and was amused at the idea of having, just out-of-the-blue, an exhibition in Singapore."

Freeman was a 23-year-old Cambridge liberal arts graduate just starting his career in photography when he approached a promoter of jazz concerts in London to check out the possibility of shooting on stage and backstage. "That gave me access to dressing room atmosphere where I got intimate shots of the guys which are probably still unique to some degree, especially those of Coltrane."

Freeman recalls those sessions vividly: "I remember Theolonius Monk walked onstage slowly, and started playing. After a short while his hands worked their way to the high end of the keyboard. He just continued playing beyond the keyboard into space while a solo went on from another instrument, moving toward the footlights until someone came in from the wings and quietly steered him back to the keyboard where he continued playing."

The graphic character that comes through in the raw, grainy pictures earned the aspiring young photographer assignments with magazines in England and London, particularly the Sunday Times.

More importantly, it led to Freeman's association with a still relatively unknown group called the Beatles, who were on their first British tour at the time. Freeman contacted their manager, Brian Epstein, and he asked Freeman to send some samples of his work.

"I sent them a selection of the jazz portraits. They said they loved the prints and the impact of the grainy black-and-white quality and the details, the big close-ups of heads and hands. I think they appreciated not only the artistry of the musicians but the way the photographs reflected that."

TWO weeks later Freeman met with the Beatles in Bournemouth. It was August, 1963. "We got on well. We had a good rapport. I liked their sense of humor, their manner, their music and the atmosphere around them so I decided to stick around for a few days and take some pictures."

In an introduction to Freeman's 1983 book, "Yesterday: Photographs of the Beatles," Paul McCartney wrote that "although many other people were taking photos of us at that time, I think we all felt that his stuff somehow summed up our own feelings. The photographs were artistic without being pretentious, and yet they were commercial enough to be enjoyed by the ordinary fan in the street."

The landmark "With the Beatles" cover, called "Meet the Beatles" in the United States, was done in the dining room of the Bournemouth hotel where the Beatles were staying. Freeman used natural light and a telephoto lens to give a compressed look to the scene and make all of the Beatles' heads look about the same size. The result was an album photograph that a New York Times book reviewer later called "the quintessential rock album cover."

Freeman went on to do four other Beatles album covers: "A Hard Day's Night," "Beatles for Sale," "Help!" and "Rubber Soul." He also designed and filmed the title sequences for the two Beatles movies and designed the covers of John Lennon's books,

"In His Own Write" and "A Spaniard in the Works."

The idea for the elongated, stretched perspective of "Rubber Soul" came about when Freeman was projecting slides for the Beatles on an album-sized piece of white cardboard and he inadvertently tilted the card backwards. McCartney immediately reacted to it and the cover was printed that way.

FREEMAN and the Beatles parted ways in 1966. "It was time to move on. Their lives were changing and the times were changing. We enjoyed the springtime of their fame and our association and now it was summer and we didn't want it to go into winter. So 'Rubber Soul' was the autumn shot."

Since then, Freeman has done film work with Bob Marley and the Wailers and Led Zeppelin, and produced documentaries, films and advertisements around the world. From 1978 to 1985, he lived and worked in Hong Kong where he still maintains a film production company in partnership with his wife, Tiddy Rowan Freeman. Exhibitions of his photographs have appeared in London and Paris, among other places.

Kirov in Paris

yinsky before it reached its more or less final form in 1899. The new version is attributed to Pyotr Gusev, "under the supervision" of Vinogradov, but the essence is in the preservation of Petipa's choreography.

Dramatically, "Le Corsaire" is complex hokum about a Greek girl, Medora, sold into slavery and rescued by a pirate, Konrad, who becomes her lover. There are multiple abductions, poisoned flowers, a slave market, a lecherous pasha, odalisques, and a celebrated "Enchanted Garden" scene. Musically it is an uneven mishmash, with roots in Adam, borrowings from Delibes, and contributions from the old St. Petersburg firm of Pugni and Drigo.

It is schlock, but marvelously entertaining schlock, and the new Kirov production is a colorfully exotic one. Teimuraz Murvanidze's sets have a lot to do with this, and presumably he is responsible for the striking prologue and epilogue, both showing the pirate ship tossed in a raging sea — the kind of old-fashioned scenic effect that can still get applause on its own.

And there is plenty of dancing, splendidly carried off in the performance in question by Asymluratova as Medora, Neff as the heroic Konrad, Ruzimatov as his friend Ali, and Zaklinsky as the slave merchant. Surprise: The pas de deux is a pas de trois in the complete ballet, and a brilliant one as carried off by Asymluratova, Neff and Ruzimatov.

VINOGRADOV has also brought along his own most recent choreography, "Potemkin," a "ballet-allegory" played without intermission in a prologue and 11 scenes. It is a characteristic Soviet "contemporary" product in the sense that it refers to a event of historical and ideological significance — the mutiny of the sailors on the battleship Potemkin in St. Petersburg in 1905 — and also in the sense that, although it requires strong male dancers, it is the narrative and theatrical values that turn out to be more important than the strictly choreographic.

The action depicts the mindless discipline and the cruelty of the ship's officers, the insane behavior of a czar-like character and his entourage, and through it all sweeps an allegorical figure of Death with his statutory scythe, taking various crew members and a group of unnamed populace — an allusion to the events at the Winter Palace in that year. The revolution failed in 1905, but here the sailors understand their moral force and move inexorably toward a better future.

Vinogradov's vocabulary hovers between mime and dance, the scenes are brief and fast-moving, and there is energy and conviction in the execution. Alexander Tchakovsky's score is cut to measure, but faceless music. Murvanidze's sets, armor-plating and heavy weaponry, are oppressively effective.

The program of short ballets and excerpts provided a tantalizing sample from another recent Vinogradov work, "The Knight in the Tiger's Skin," and the full ballet is being performed once (Jan. 5). "Swan Lake" returns from Dec. 15 to Jan. 3, with numerous cast changes, and the season closes with four performances of "Giselle" from Jan. 7 to 10, two of them with Yekaterina Maximova and Vladimir Vasiliev, guests from the Bolshoi.

The story is that, when George Balanchine returned to Leningrad with his New York company, Konstantin Sergeyev (then the Kirov director) welcomed him "to the home of classical ballet." No, Balanchine replied, Leningrad is the home of romantic ballet. New York is the home of classical ballet. Perhaps the most interesting aspect of the Kirov at this stage is its openness, under Vinogradov, toward choreographers from the West. Béjart and Roland Petit have staged works for the company, and now it is reported that Balanchine — the great formalist — will enter the repertory of his former home theater for the first time with "Serenade" and "Scottish Symphony." That would be worth the trip.

Dollar Tumbles on Trade Shortfall

NEW YORK — The dollar closed at record postwar lows against the Japanese yen and the Deutsche mark Thursday and retreated sharply against other currencies on news of a wider U.S. trade deficit.

Table with 2 columns: Currency, Rate. Includes Deutsche mark, French franc, Japanese yen, Swiss franc, and British pound.

"It is natural under the floating system that the value of a currency changes in the long run as it is determined by market forces," Mr. Miyazawa told a parliamentary committee.

currency from the day's nadir, but it ended near record lows. It closed in London at 1.6365 DM, down more than two pennings from Wednesday's close of 1.6620, and at 129.40 Japanese yen, a loss of nearly 3 yen from 132.35.

Taiwan Dollar Records Biggest One-Day Jump

TAIPEI — The Taiwan dollar recorded its largest single-day jump against the U.S. dollar, rising nine Taiwan cents to close at 29.11.

U.S. Edges Toward 'Benign Neglect' of Dollar

WASHINGTON — Despite last week's cuts in European interest rates and other actions abroad to stabilize currencies, the Reagan administration is sticking to its new policy of leaving the value of the dollar largely to the judgment of the financial markets, according to administration officials and Wall Street currency experts.

Adopted just before the collapse of world stock markets in October, the new policy marks a partial return to the "benign neglect" of currency exchange rates that the United States often demonstrated in the 1970s and the first half of the 1980s.

That commitment, a part of the so-called Louvre accord that the Group of Seven industrial countries reached in February, assumed that other policy changes would be made, including cuts in interest rates abroad, to keep the dollar stable.

The dollar also plunged to 5.546 French francs from 5.6295 and to 1.3323 Swiss francs from 1.3585. And it fell against the British pound, which climbed to $1.8355 from $1.8045.

something even more troubling — a sunset economy for America. Financial markets had been focusing on the deficit figure to see if September's improvement from a $15.68 billion gap in August signaled a lasting shift in U.S. trade prospects.

ive for the dollar," said Stephen Roach, senior economist at Morgan Stanley & Co. "Unacceptably wide foreign trade deficits are going to put further pressure on the dollar to clear the deficit through price factors instead of through trade volume."

NEW YORK — The U.S. economy will dodge a recession in 1988 but will have higher interest rates, heightened inflation and volatile financial markets, according to Henry Kaufman, a leading Wall Street economist.

Kaufman Sees '88 Turmoil, '89 Recession

Mr. Kaufman, managing director at Salomon Inc., also predicted Wednesday in his annual report on the world economic and financial outlook that the "element of crisis" present in global markets in October likely would emerge again in 1988.

But Mr. Kaufman said that next year's growth would mark the last phase of the current U.S. expansion and likely would be followed by recession in 1989.

TRUMP: The Art of the Deal

By Donald Trump with Tony Schwartz. 246 pages. $19.95. Random House, 201 East 50th Street, New York, N. Y. 10022.

Reviewed by Jonathan Yardley

WHAT we have here is a campaign biography, though what Donald Trump is running for is anything but clear. He's already been voted into an exalted position on Spy magazine's list of the 100 "Most Annoying, Alarming and Appalling People, Places and Things in New York and the Nation" — he placed third, behind Ivan Boesky and Ronald Reagan — so it's somewhat difficult to imagine what else he could be running for, yet of one thing we can be certain: Donald Trump is on the run, or the make. One need look no further than "Trump: The Art of the Deal" for conclusive proof. This thin autobiography is a public relations sell from the first page to the last.

The Art of the Deal

There's an ample amount of noisy mouthing-off about wheeling and dealing, at which Trump regards himself as an artist, but there is comparatively little about the nitty-gritty. On a couple of occasions Trump remarks in passing that construction is a rough business, but he has nothing — repeat, nothing — to tell us about how construction gets done in the snake pit of crime and labor, which is Manhattan, not just any building, but the one that is the reality of construction and daily dealing in the world of casinos, in which he is becoming an ever more visible and active participant.

A Far Out Theory: Martians Are Tormenting the Yankees

By George Vecsey
New York Times Service
NEW YORK — There are people who believe they were kidnapped by aliens but could never quite prove it. That may be the only possible explanation for what happened to Lou Piniella the other night.

In his clothes, he appeared to be unharmed, but he was unshaven, and very hungry. Piniella has been reluctant to report this possible incident to the authorities. He does not want to be labeled a crackpot. But an outsider can try to reconstruct the missing hours in Lou Piniella's life.

It may have begun with a phone call: angry, squeaking noises at the other end of the line. Piniella may have vaguely aware of being told not to leave his room. Perhaps he had found his door locked from the outside.

Whether out of hunger or out of fear, Piniella then passed into a deep sleep. Sometime during the night, he was visited by a strange apparition. The windows opened, and an alien materialized, wearing a navy-blue blazer, a striped tie, a blue shirt, gray slacks, tasseled loafers and short hair, very short hair. Perhaps Piniella was ted out the memory of a jaw with a double chin, wagging up and down at him for hours. If it happened this way, it would have been worse than any nightmare. Piniella would have probably thought he had done something wrong, but he didn't know what. He kept wanting to go to the bathroom. He could imagine all the general managers laughing and having a good time, making deals over cocktails, but every time he tried to catch up to them, he would be blown back from the door.

Is this the Yankee-napper?

Piniella has been stunned by his brush with the unknown, particularly in light of what happened to him last summer, while he was managing the Yankees. The owner of the team, George Steinbrenner, became enraged when he could not contact Piniella by telephone.

The Birds may be brothers, but they aren't clones. Eddie missed all 11 of his shots in the game Friday night, although he was perfect from the free throw line, scoring two points.

NEW YORK — If this were a screenplay, Vijay Amritraj of Hollywood would not even take a powder lunch to consider it.

What a preposterous script: A 33-year-old from Madras, India — as much actor as tennis player these days — leads his nation past the Soviet Union, Argentina, Israel and Australia to reach the final of the Davis Cup tournament.

India got past the Soviet Union in the relegation round to qualify for the 1987 tournament. Then in the first round, India played a past champion, Argentina.

Down two sets and 3-0 to Martin Jaitie, Amritraj rallied to win the third set. But he faced match point in the fourth set. With the flair and whimsy that have graced his career, Amritraj flicked a drop shot that barely crossed the net, and staved off elimination with a volley. India won, 3-2, to postpone the next round, against Israel.

Fleming to Become McEnroe's Manager

The Associated Press
LONDON — Peter Fleming, 32, the longtime doubles partner of tennis star John McEnroe, said Wednesday he will become manager of the volatile left-hander in an attempt to help him regain his No. 1 world ranking.

"My major goal is to get him back physically as good as he was three years ago when he was No. 1. If I can do that, then I think everything else will fall into place," Fleming said at the Masters Doubles tourney, a title he and McEnroe won seven times between 1978 and 1984.

Major Leagues Take Small Step Toward Expansion

New York Times Service
DALLAS — The expansion of major league baseball has moved forward slightly, with it being turned over to a joint committee of the American and National leagues Wednesday, but the commissioner, Peter Ueberroth, made it clear that nothing concrete could be done until two "hurries" had been cleared in the next two years: negotiations for new contracts with the players' union and the television networks.

four new ones would have to join the National League to balance them at 16 teams each. The Mariners made Big Trades. The Seattle Mariners traded the final hours of the winter baseball meetings by making major trades with the Baltimore Orioles and the Philadelphia Phillies.

ers, the Mariners sent Mike Morgan to the Orioles for Ken Dixon. Morgan, 28, was 12-17 with a 4.65 earned-run average last season in 34 games, 31 of them starts. He has a 33-62 major league mark. Dixon, 27, was 7-10 with a 6.43 ERA and allowed 31 home runs in 101 innings.

Wall Streeters View 'Wall Street'

By Geraldine Fabrikant

NEW YORK — For many investment banking luminaries at a private screening of "Wall Street" on Monday night, watching the new film was like watching home movies.

The daily action on the trading floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

There were familiar faces, with cameo roles by pals and colleagues and familiar deals in the movie about wheeling, dealing and crime on Wall Street. People in the audience nudged one another when Kenneth Lipper, the investment banker and former deputy mayor of New York, appeared on screen. They nudged each other again when Donald Burnham Lambert's Jeff Beck came on.

A 10-Year-Old 'Heroin'

A 10-year-old girl who led female classmates in a protest of her school's celebration of the U.S. Constitution's bicentennial has been named one of Ms. magazine's Women of the Year. Sarah Rosen said she encouraged her classmates at Muesel School in South Bend, Indiana, to protest because girls were not given a role in the celebration that re-enacted the signing of the Constitution. Teachers who organized the event decided to exclude the girls because women did not have the right to vote at the time. Rosen and her friends were enraged at the exclusion because non-white males, who did not have the right to vote when the Constitution was written, were allowed to participate. "It just really upset me that they would leave out girls," Rosen said. "And they weren't going to let us in because I don't think Asians were there, and blacks were slaves and I don't think they got to be delegates."
